GREG SIDES

GREG- (coming forward) My real name is Sidney Kenneth Beckenstein. My Jewish name is Rochmel Lev Ben Yokov Meyer Beckenstein, and my professional name is Gregory Gardner. Very East Side, and I do not deny it. I'm 32.

GREG- The worst thing in school was every time the teacher called on me... I'd be hard, I'd be hard. Really, I'd have to lean up against the desk like this. (he demonstrates) And the teacher would say, "Stand up straight". I can't. I have a pain in my—side. "Stand up straight". Or walking down the hall, you'd have to walk like this, with all your books stacked up in front of you. And the bus was the worst. I'd just look at a bus and... bingo. And then there was the time it was making out in the back seat with Sally Ketchum... we were necking and I was feeling her boobs, and feeling her boobs, and after about an hour or she said, "Ooohhh!... don't you want to feel anything else? And I suddenly thought to myself, "No, I don't."

ZACH- Did that come as a surprise to you?

GREG- I guess, yeah. It was probably the first time I realized I was homosexual and I got so depressed because I thought being gay meant being an outcast all the rest of my life, a bum, and I said "Gee, I'll never get to wear nice clothes. . ." And I was really into clothes, I had this pair of powder blue and pink gabardine pants...
